A PROGRAM BY AARON TAN

Welcome and Installation

Hey there! Glad to see you've downloaded this program.

It's very easy to get started. Just double click on its icon and you'll be ready to practice all the literary devices you'll need!

Main Menu

This is the first screen of the program.

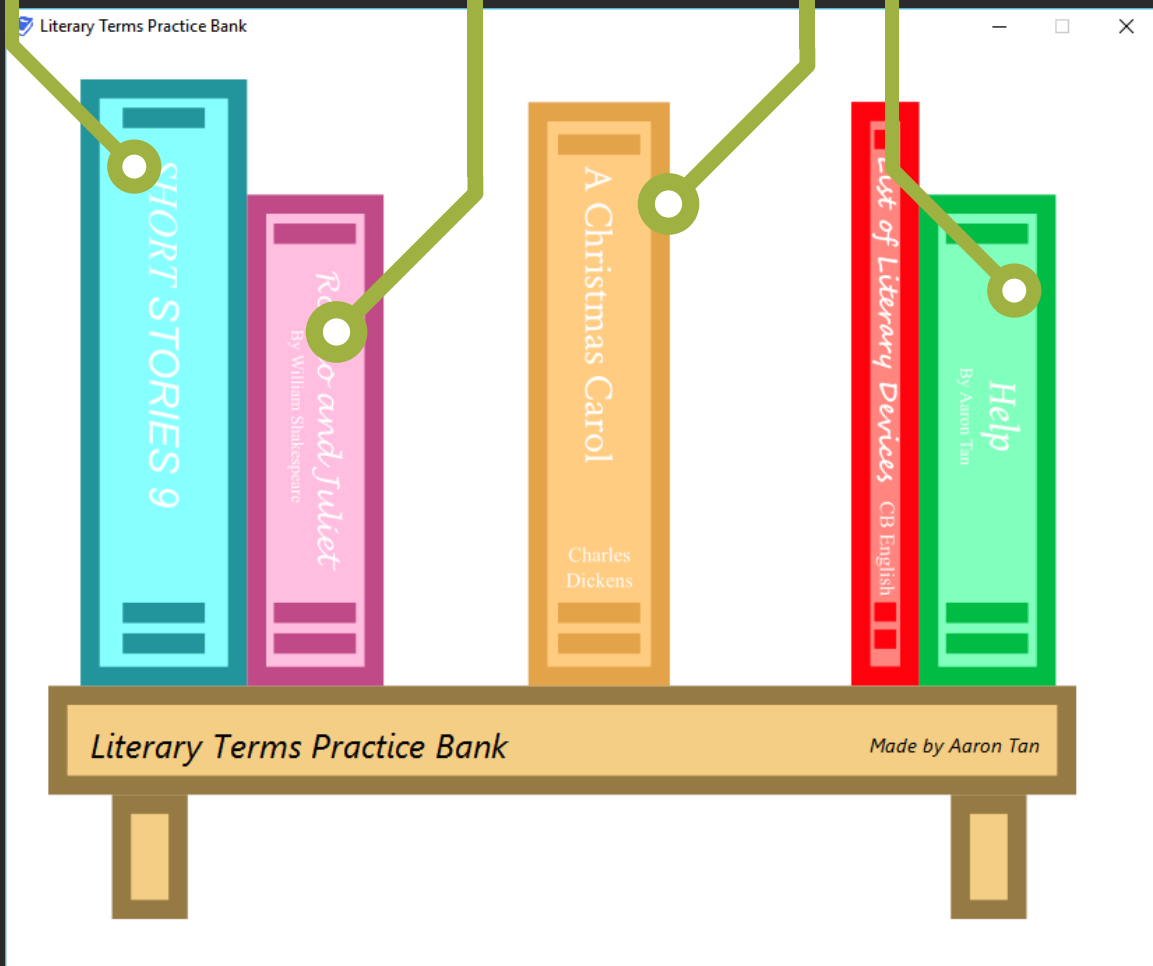

Use it to navigate to various screens by clicking on a book from the shelf. Each book contains unique literary device examples with cited quotations and examples from that work.

Excerpts from Sight Lines, the short story textbook.

Excerpts from A Christmas Carol, by Charles Dickens.

Excerpts from Shakespeare's famous play, Romeo and Juliet.

Links to helpful documents.

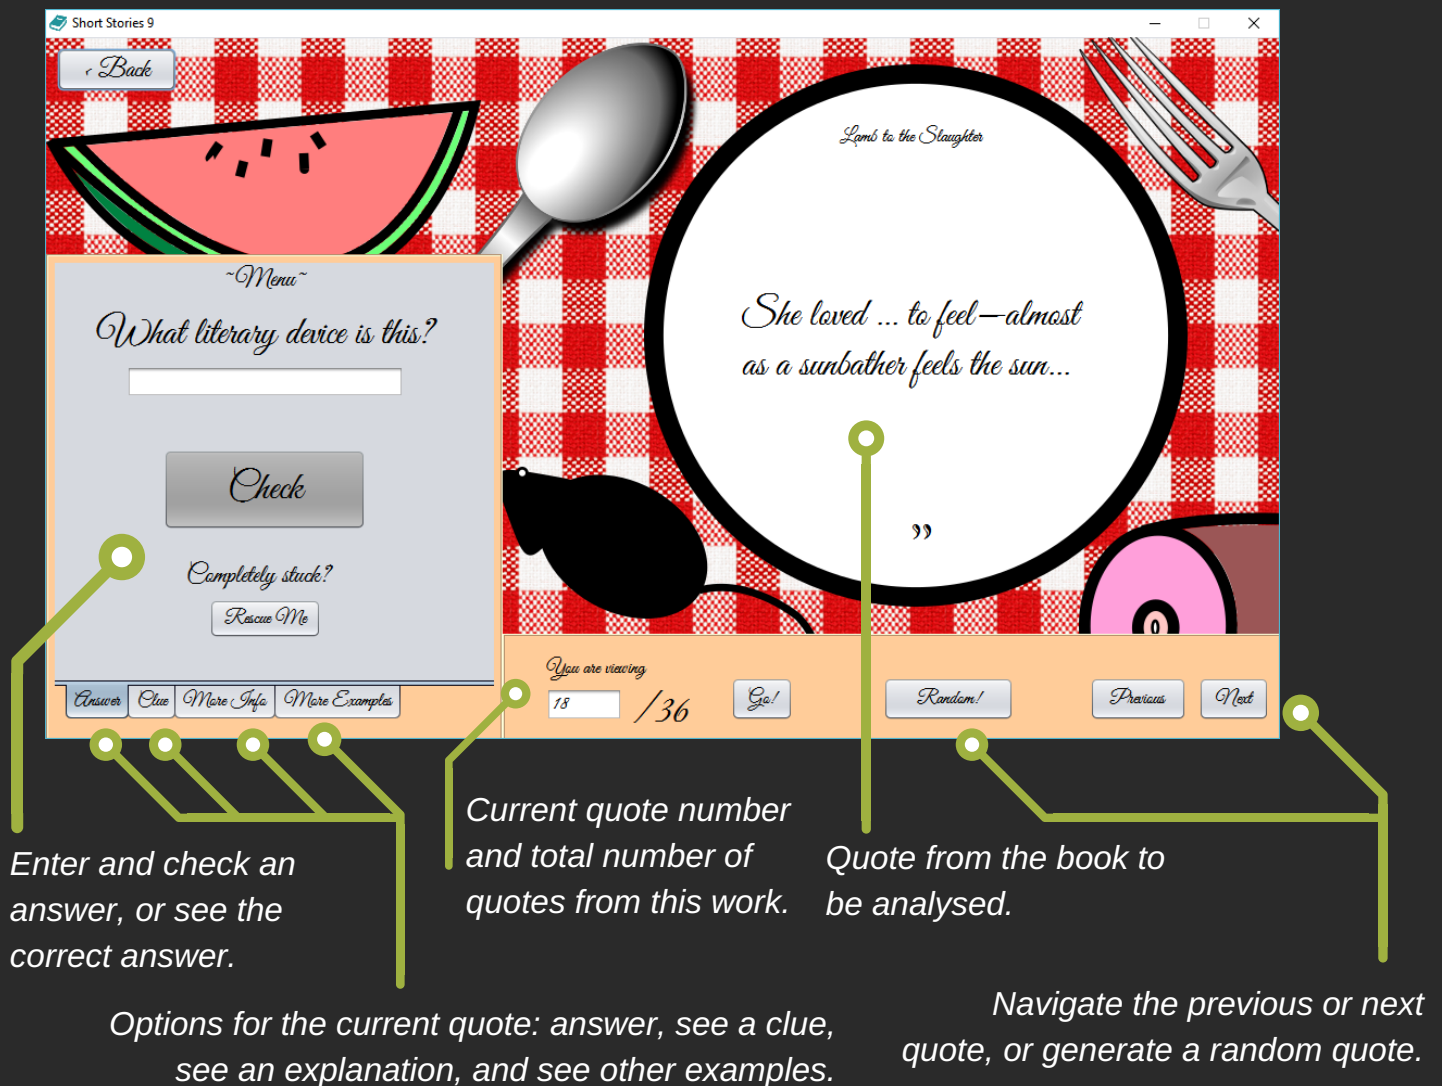

Navigating the UI

Each book contains its own distinct UI.

Each book is designed to match the contents of its book, and presents a different interface depending on which book is selected.

Short Stories 9

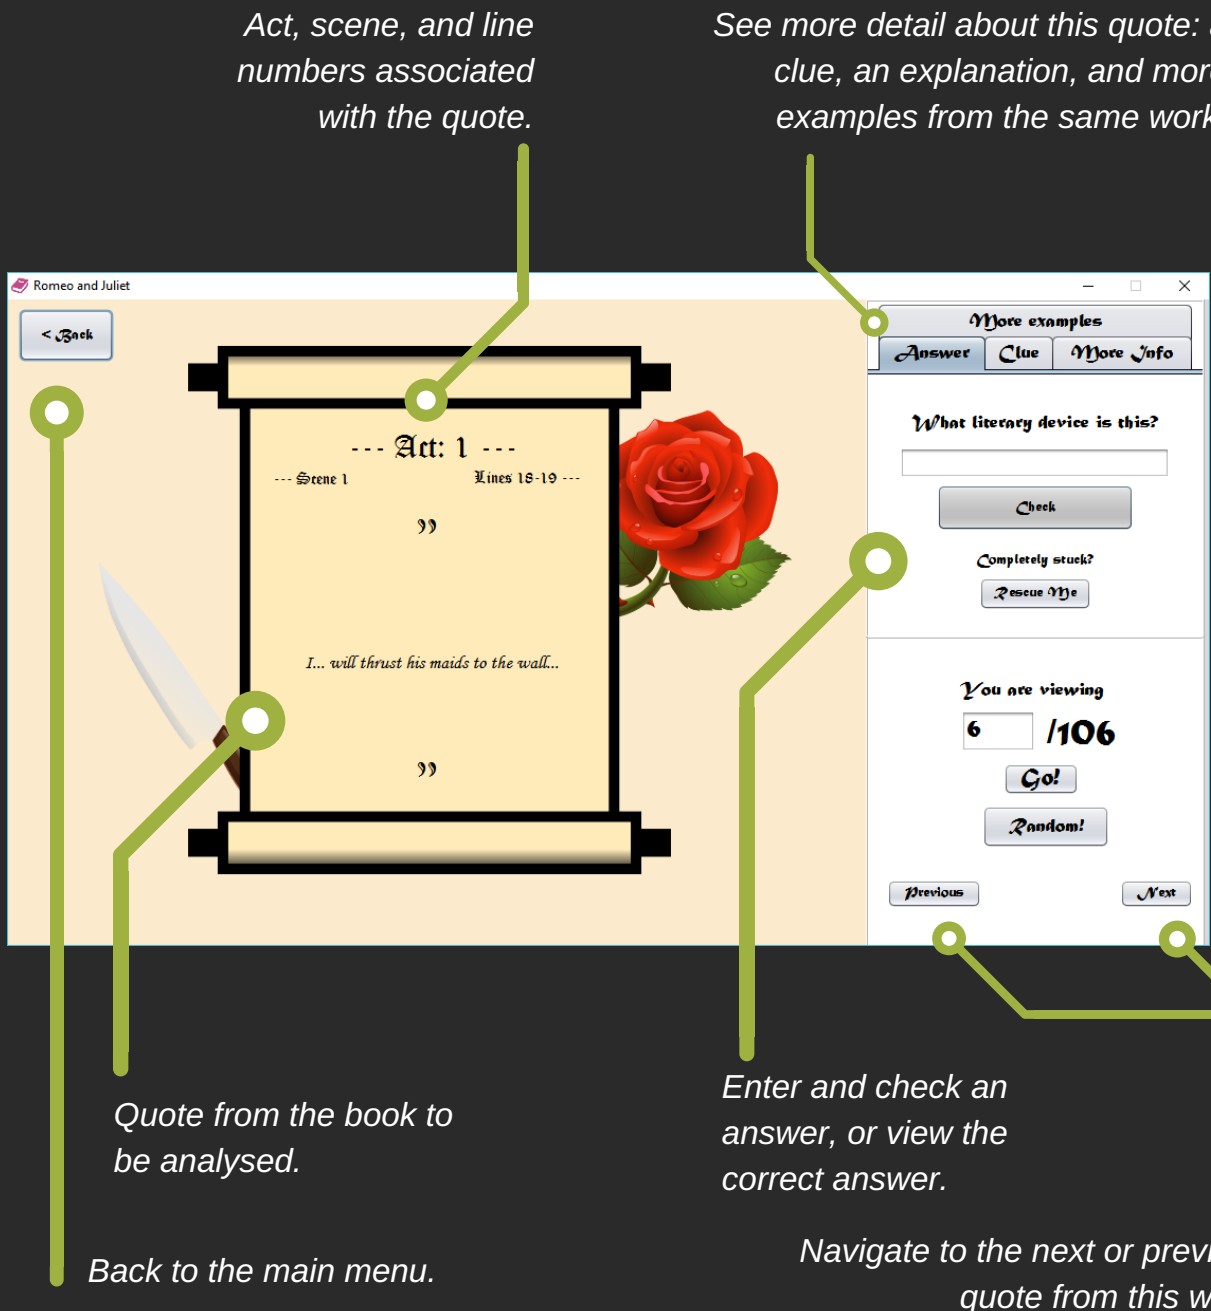

In this book, the quote appears on the dinner plate, answers are entered and checked on the menu in the bottom left corner, and navigating through questions is accomplished with the navigation bar in the bottom right.

Romeo and Juliet

In this book, the chosen passage appears on a scroll and navigation elements are off to the right of the screen.

A Christmas Carol

In this book, the passage is presented as a letter to Santa on a winter-themed background.

See more detail about this quote: a clue, an explanation, and more examples from the same work.
